

Clay Wardlaw

Clay Wardlaw is president and chief operating officer of Safety Plus LLC, a family owned and operated business headquartered in Chattanooga Tennessee.

Wardlaw is a biological safety professional with more than 15 years of safety, compliance, infection control, and decontamination experience with particular expertise in biosafety program development, implementation, and facility compliance. Wardlaw's unique experience in compliance assessment spans the spectrum from working with several leading healthcare and university systems in the United States to developing business-specific programs for tailored needs.

Wardlaw leads Safety Plus's Biological Response Team in the international Ebola response working with health care leaders stateside and internationally to contain, monitor, decontaminate, and certify to compliance aviation vehicles, patient care areas, hospital equipment, and treatment rooms.

Wardlaw has been instrumental in building comprehensive certification programs at several healthcare facilities and large research universities. Leading his team at Safety Plus, Wardlaw is responsible for the certification management and compliance oversight of nearly 2,000 laboratories including BSL-2, BSL-3, and BSL3+ facilities.

Wardlaw has been sought as an expert in several facility planning and programming activities across the United States, working with government agencies, private industry, pharmaceutical manufacturers, universities, and healthcare.